

Dear colleagues,

Changes in human-environmental relations and technological advances have changed the pattern of human life, which can be expected to both control environmental threats and exacerbate natural hazards. The intensification of the water shortage crisis, the occurrence of multiple floods, reduced soil fertility and land erosion, groundwater depletion and the manifestation of dust events highlight the importance and necessity of conserving natural resources and comprehensive management of watersheds. In this regard, improving the living conditions of utilizers of water and soil resources, restoring forest and rangeland ecosystems, and preserving wetlands and lakes will be the necessities of today in preserving and protecting natural resources, water, and soil and reducing environmental damage.

Taking into consideration stated, we are arranging international conference that is going to provoke discussions with the subject of Conservation of Natural Resources and Environment.

Please find this e-mail as a call for Abstract submission for the
